

EU solid-state battery energy storage factory

Overview

Can solid-state batteries be produced in Europe?

The Chair of Production Engineering of E-Mobility Components (PEM) at RWTH Aachen University has completed a study on the future production of solid-state batteries in Europe together with partners. Among other things, the experts analyze the global activities in this area and work out the unique selling points of domestic production.

Are solid-state batteries the future of energy storage?

Solid-state batteries stand at the forefront of energy storage revolution, promising to reshape how we power everything from electric vehicles to renewable energy systems. Recent breakthroughs by European researchers have achieved unprecedented energy density levels, pushing these batteries closer to mass-market adoption.

Why is battery production important for the EU?

Batteries, widely used in the transport and energy sectors, are central to the global energy system. They will be key to the EU's clean energy transition, industrial future and strategic autonomy. Boosting the industrial base for battery production is therefore a key task for the EU.

Can solid-state batteries be integrated with solar systems?

The integration of solid-state batteries with solar systems could revolutionize residential and commercial power management, offering more efficient and reliable energy storage solutions. As manufacturing scales up and costs decrease, solid-state batteries are positioned to become a cornerstone of Europe's clean energy transition.
